

positions we won last year.—GRANT'S re-election would bury Tammany and all its supporters fifty fathoms deep.

A Few Considerations.

1. GREELEY'S election would mean the unsettling of business all over the country.—Gen. GRANT'S would instantly lead to the recovery of trade from the excitement of a Presidential election, and insure the continued prosperity of the entire Union.

2. GREELEY'S election would mean the installment in office of some of the very worst men in the country. FENTON and BROOKS and FERNANDO WOOD have not been working for GREELEY without hope of reward.—GRANT'S re-election would inevitably lead to thorough and comprehensive civil service reform, for he has already attested his desire for such a measure, and the Republican Party is pledged to support it.

3. GREELEY'S election would involve fresh disturbance at the South, where he and his friends have revived expectations which can never be realized.—GRANT'S re-election would allay political excitement at the South, and be accepted as final evidence that the people are determined that the results of the war shall not be disturbed.

4. GREELEY'S election would lead to all sorts of wild and chaotic experiments in our financial policy.—GRANT'S re-election would insure perseverance in a course which has met, in the main, with the approbation of the country.

5. GREELEY'S election would mean the return to power of the very worst class of Democrats, hungry for the spoils of office, and indifferent to questions of honor or principle.—GRANT'S re-election secures us four years of peaceful progress, and will enable the Republican Party to carry out numerous measures worthy of its achievements in the past.

6. GREELEY'S election would mean, so far as New-York State is concerned, the revival of Tammany, and the utter loss of all the
